Staff Now Parks In General Areas

General campus parking permits ave been issued to faculty and have been issu staff members.

These permits have been issued because of the continuous shift in parking areas due to the construction of new buildings and because many faculty members have responsibilities on different parts of the campus, Dr. Leslie L. Martin, dean of men announced.

Faculty and staff permit holders will be admitted to the parking lots on Rose Street, College View, scott Street and the new lot at the east end of Stoll Field because of the reduction in the number of parking spaces, particularly in the area of McVey Hall, Dean Martin said.

The area signs will remain on campus for use in issuing cutations to violators.

Prepared For The 'Flood'

It is encouraging to know there is some interest at UK to see that we are not a part of a possible mass incineration.

The establishment of a Campus Safety and Emergency Committee, under the terse leadership of Lloyd Mahan, is truely the beginning for a definite plan of action. It is honestly hoped that the purposes for the establishment of this committee will remain as a steadfast image and not be lost in the jungle of committee meetings and the high grass of other obligations.

The nine subgroups, appointed by the main committee to study the various phases of civil defeuse, must act quickly and accurately. At present, we still remain nakedly unprepared. For if, and it must remain at that level, the bomb the whole world fears have to know where to go and how to fend for themselves. This needs direction, and it is up to the committee to provide that leadership now.

There is an unusual and dramatic bit of irony to our preparation for this Twentieth Century situation, if we believe history repeats itself. Without gushing over the Bible in some blind fashion, it is hard to read the story of Noah and not consider its modern ramifications. The people of Noah's day thought the ark was folly-until the flood; then it was too late.

Will the campus population be so complacent and apathetic as to wait that long-until it is too late? Let us hope that if nuclear war and holoeaust do come, we will not be a part of the original cast, because we have

Aside from the familiar, "Doctor 7863 call the exchange," an unusual and disheartening statement of University policy was issued through the voice of John Heber to fans attending last Saturday's Ole Miss game.

In effect, the University announcer said children were to stay off the playing field after the game and that the players had been instructed by their coaches not to give away their chin straps. Oh, sigh!

Here we are in a University community that provides full scholarships for men to come play football, pays for tutors for some members of the team, charges $1 for using University parking lots, and charges 50 cents for a roster of the two teams. A University which maintains several fulltime employees to handle public relations-alas.

To the hard, materialistic coaches who instructed their he-men to keep their chin straps, the straps are merely part of stock equipment, money in the bank. But to some aspiring Throekmorton, a chinstrap is more than a sweaty piece of leather. It is a symbol of prestige, of respect, and of gratitude to the football players and to the University. Some day, little Throckmorton may want to come to the University, to study and learn-to be a football player. Alasl

The University should not deny these idol-struck, aspiring youths. It can help stamp out juvenile delinquency and build good public relations, if it would only give away those sweaty pieces of leather.

Glance Back To 1919

A small news dispatch from England reports that British scientists gathered at Manchester University to commemorate the birth in 1871 of Lord Rutherford. The New Zealandborn physicist was a man of genins whose work would have placed him in the front rank of the scientists of our century whatever the course of world history might have been. As things have turned out, it is the course of world history that gave the Manchester ceremonies a special significance, for it was Ernest Rutherford who in 1919 made the discovery that proved a key link in the chain of investigations and experiments leading to the production of the atomic bomb and its successor weap-

The nature of science is such that there are no absolutely new beginnings in it and perhaps no single step can be called decisive above all others. But when Rutherford bombarded nitrogen with what he had earlier christened as the alpha rays of radium and found that this induced atomic changes in pitrogen there was a leap forward into the future, although none knew how far that leap was to earry mankind.

Nearly two decades were to pass before the idea of an atomic bomb gained any enrrency even in the scientific world-and Rutherford himself died in 1937 without ever believing in its development. Yet that was, as science goes, an extremely short time between a fundamental inquiry and an application affecting all mankind. Rarely, if ever, has it been proved so swiftly, and so massively that an increase in pure knowledge can be an access of terrifying power. -The Evening Sun, Baltimore.

Reasons For The Surge In City Costs, Deficits The average American city dweller patronage and contract favoritism are 000,000 last year—about half the cost citizen-taxpayer check on the process still rebels at taxation-without-representation but seems strangely clined to put up with taxation-byunknown-representation.

In an era when city property taxes have grown systematically, then begotten sales and gross receipts taxes, too, urban voters still show a marked reluctance to pay attention to names at the bottom of the ballot. Or to follow the budget work of their city council appropriations committee. Or to care about competitive bidding, assessment procedures, city hall overstaffing, and a host of other problems that gain the spotlight in a Washington setting but are often overlooked closer to home.

This is not to suggest that corruption is chiefly responsible for rising city taxes. Far from it. Deferred maintenance and delayed replacement of city plant are the chief cause. Tainted but a small rider on the back of this bonauza in public works and expanded public services.

Historically there is a good reason for this surge in city costs-and defi-

The Great Depression and the second Great War diverted so large a percentage of public expenditures away from the building and maintenance of cities to other social and military purposes that city halls have spent most of the postwar years wallowing in red ink trying to recover lost ground.

Analyzing Census Bureau statisties from 310 major American cities, the Congressional Quarterly shows that although deficits have dropped slightly in the past year they have done so only because more tax revenues have been collected. 310 cities alone spent over $15,000,- of running the federal government (defense costs excepted), Confirming the theory that much of this is caused by deferred maintenance (slum clearance or urban renewal), the CQ analysis shows that the greatest single increase in city hudgets last year was for housing and redevelopment-up 73.8 percent.

This spending is inherently useful, not bad. On the average, city-federal renewal dollars are stimulating private enterprise investment at a 1-to-5 ratio. And they are creating clean livable new areas, sometimes (though not often enough) aesthetically rewarding and socially improved. At the same time such renewal is helping to preserve for the American people an investment in city plant estimated to total about $500,000,000,000-a major national asset.

What is needed is simply a better citizen-taxpayer cheek on the process. Local appropriations committee members ought to be watched carefully for signs of mutual back-scratching, Public works bidding procedures and the criteria for awarding urban renewal contracts ought to receive more than cursory public attention.

In short those voters who complain about "big government" and demand local rights should examine their own performance to see whether they are ready for what they ask, They ought to know the ealiber of every local official found in the musty bottom reaches of the ballot. And they ought to mount a close watch on performance after these officials are elected.

Otherwise, increased home rule and local initiative may prove more wasteful than that famous trip of tax money to Washington and back. -THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONTION.

Cats Try To Bounce Back In SEC Bout At Auburn

Can the Wildeats scratch back? That is the question many observers are asking as Kentucky's luckless Wildcats depart for Auburn, Ala., this morning and a game against the Auburn Tigers tomorrow afternoon. Game time is set for 2 p.m.

Tigers tomorrow afternoon. Game time is set for 2 p.m., Coach Blanton Collier and his staff will board a chartered airliner at 11:45 this morning along with the 35 to 40-man traveling squad when they take off in quest of their first victory of the season and first Southeastern Conference decision since the Vanderbiit game of 1960.

Although fuily aware that Auburn's decisive comeback win over Tennessee's Vols last week has established them as one of the favorites in the SEC, the Wildeats are determined to start making their potential strength pay off.

How good a physical shape the Cats are in for the SEC affair is still somewhat of a question. Full-back Gary Cochran, injured in the opener against Miami, set out the entire Ole Miss game. The coaching staff is hopeful he will be ready for action tomorrow.

The Tigers finished 1960 with an 8-2 record and Coach Jordan frankly admits he has a more experienced team than a year ago. Halfback Jimmy Burson appears to be the most explosive Tiger. He intercepted a pass and returned it to the Wildcat 27 in the game last year to set up Ed Dyas' winning field goal. Against Tennessee in the opener the fleet-footed, 182-pounder from LaGrange, Ga., did the same thing.
